Storing & Defrosting Kits

STORING KITS

All our food items should be stored (0°F or below).

For service, all pizzas cook from frozen. All other items cook from refrigerated temperature (38°F). 24 hours before service period, remove kits from case and move from a frozen to refrigerated environment. Kits have a 3-day shelf life at a continuous refrigerated temperature if top seals are intact.

OUR RECOMMENDATIONS

Work with your projected/historical sales to set a par level for kits kept refrigerated and ready to cook for service periods. Depending on customer demand, your operation will want to have 120%+ of projected sell through fully slacked to accommodate any peaks or rushes you might have. Consider the FIFO (First In, First Out) rule when defrosting your kits.

Disclaimer: Kits are in aluminum packaging and should not be placed in a microwave for defrosting. Defrosting under cold water or at room temperature is not recommended for this packaging and will impact food safety and quality.

Cooking Programming for Non-Pizzas/Kits

HOW TO FIRE KIT ITEMS

Cooking kit items is a two-step process. You will first see the display for Menu Category, then the list of dish names.

Step 1: Select the menu category you need

For example, Apps and Sides outlined in the first image.

Commingling Guide for Mixed Dish Items

HOW TO COMMINGLE

To optimize cooking efficiency, refer to the commingling table on the right that groups dishes with identical cooking programs together to maximize throughput. Example:

- Chicken Tenders and Mac and Cheese cook in 4 mins

Additionally, for items with varying cook times in the same program group, you may stagger cooking. Start the cook program with the longest cook time and synchronize others accordingly. Example:

- Start with Chicken Tenders at 4:00 mins
- Add Brussels Sprouts at the 3:00 min mark
- Add Cheesesteak at 2:30 mins

Please note, failure to follow guide will affect temperature, quality and consistency of product.
